

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Prior to placing my name on the Indiana do not call list, I received many unsolicited telemarketing calls at all hours of the day and into the evening. I resorted to caller ID and refused to answer any call that was blocked, private or did not display the number. Since placing my name on the list, the number of unwanted calls has reduced dramatically. We would get numerous calls, sometimes 4-5 a day and now it is minimal, only those permitted under Indiana Law. I would actually like their law tightened to eliminate all calls. However, I am glad the law is in effect and that I am able to eliminate virtually all telemarketing calls. Do not allow a federal law to be set into effect that would water down the tough state law. Let the states determine the Telephone Privacy law.
